~~Re: Asset Preservation for Post-Resuscitation Access~~

Before disclosing any particulars concerning asset preservation it would only be appropriate to note that DJL has engaged in extensive estate planning. The various business structures and the family arrangements of DJL are unique. As a result there will only be presented by way of this memorandum a generalization of what DJL has accomplished in anticipation of reanimation. It would be inappropriate to set out at length the specific provisions of DJL's estate plan as it bears upon reanimation in that there may be some inclination for another individual to appropriate the provision for adoption into their plan. The point is that this is not a "one size fits all" and appropriation of a portion or all of another's estate plan possibly would not yield the result one is looking for.

Among various trusts created by DJL the one germane to this discussion is the "Reanimation Trust."

The reanimation trust is a separate trust created for the benefit of the Trustor (DJL), and the Trustor's descendants.

Prior to reanimation the trustee is directed to distribute the net income of the trust to or for the benefit of the Trustor's descendants or other heirs. The trust is structured in such a manner to provide that at all times prior to the termination of the trust there shall be one or more individual income beneficiaries, provided that the number of heirs constituting such income beneficiaries shall be as small as possible.
